Dear, Grandpa Charlie

By Lexi Laduke

You were my grandma's gift the one she had been looking for, the angel sent down from heaven & you landed at her door. You filled her life with happiness & helped her up when she was down, you gave her the biggest smile one the days that she would frown. You grew closer to the family & made a place deep in my heart. We knew you'd stay here with us from the very start. God blessed us with your presence, oh how lucky my family became. Now that you've returned home it seems like its such a shame. The memories are still there and they will never leave, they are stuck like a tattoo underneath my sleeve. When you came here to our lives we knew the time would come, we knew you would return from the place you had come from. You turned in your wonderful soul in for a beautiful set of wings, though it left out hearts heavy the pain no longer stings. As you keep your eyes on us from heaven up above, we will never forget the gifts you left us, trust, happiness and love.
