“ When I was a newspaper reporter in Tennessee, on Friday afternoons, around 1:30, I'd get a call from Kawliga Workman to come over to his brother Kermit's, to play some "old country songs" in his garage. Beers were plentiful. The old boys were all gathered 'round. Kermit would sing a song he wrote that was heartbreaking and beautiful that no one would ever hear. And then there was the time that Kermit came to my doublewide, and said, "Come on, boy!" I grabbed my Davis .32 semiautomatic, and went outside. Kermit was there. He said. "Put that peashooter away, and let's go to Newport and sing some Johnny Cash." And that's what we did. Hoist one for Kawliga Workman!
