“ Vicki, we had so many great memories at Lake Mary High School. There was our little group that had so much fun. And then after you moved away to live in Tennessee, we'd gather together when you'd come back to visit, Who can forget Alfred!. We would pick a restaurant to have lunch and it was like we were never separated by distance. We love you Vicki and look forward to all getting together again one day.

“ Since attending the Newport First Christian Church some 3 years ago, we always looked forward to Vicki’s warm greeting and sweet smile. Upon praying for her in the hospital, I will never forget how she placed my husbands hands and mine clasping them together with her hands gently perched on top. Though her communication skills were a severe handicap at that time, this beautiful gesture said more than any words could.

While she was recovering from her stroke, her absence was deeply felt in our body. Many from our congregation visited her regularly. I spent several hours with her one day at the facility where she was recovering, and enjoyed teaching her to play farkle. She, quite skillfully rolled a straight on her first roll for a whopping 2000 points. I then discovered her fiercely competitive side. She beat me hands down and enjoyed doing it. (And looked good doing it too, with her always pretty manicured fingernails.)

All that being said, Vicki’s love for her granddaughter, Amanda, spoke loud and clear, and the the tender loving care Amanda expended on both her grandparents was exemplary!

Vicki was a close friend to my entire family. She was very close to my parents from church and Vicki, my other and I used to spend just about every Saturday together for years...going shopping and eating together. She used to say that the only reason i brought her along was to be the 'bag lady' and laugh. Vicky and my mother, Vera Green were very close, and when i told my son about Vicki passing, my son immediately replied.. "at least she will be able to see her best friend again"...i send my prayers to all of her friends and family... Vicki was loved by many and will be missed by many. Vera

To Amanda and Charlie we send our love and prayers. Always remember and cherish the love Vickie had for both of you. Sharleen, Christy and McKayla
